Having had the rooms formerly occupied by him at 2 1-2 Kenduskeag Bridge.
But which was burned out in the recent fire, repaired, remodeled, and fitted up in the best manner, with all the modern instruments and appliances for the performance of all kinds of operations in Dentistry, begs leave to inform his old friends and patrons, and the public generally, that he is at home again in the same old spot, where he would be happy to see them and wait upon them with anything wanted in the Dentistry line.
He would call special attention to his new apparatus for generating Nitrous Oxide Gas, Sprague's Patent—the only generator that makes a pure and painless gas, and the only one of the kind ever in this city.
He continues also his specialty of administering the gas, which is fast taking the place of the old method of inhalation, being entirely safe to the most delicate persons.
Please give him a call at his new rooms.

SATURDAY, OCT. 15, 1870.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE WAR

The Democrat has always been [illegible] regarding current events [illegible] of mental distortion, which [illegible] pressions very much like the [illegible] of a camera. Whether done [illegible] thirsty people of the North [illegible] sible for the Rebel bombardment [illegible] Sumter, or charging upon Pr[illegible] countability for permitting [illegible] war against her, and threaten[illegible] of the Imperial fetes in [illegible] it adheres to what we might [illegible] consistent inconsistency.

The circumstances preceding [illegible] strumentalities which brought [illegible] present war in Europe are fa[illegible] read the papers intelligently, [illegible] Napoleon's Government so [illegible] pretext to plunge into an age[illegible] Prussia, is a matter of histor[illegible] nal licking the recklessness [illegible] would have the hardihood to [illegible]

That paper, however, persists in reversing the facts, and in an article headed "Prussia responsible for the war," attempts to prove that the Germans were accountable for the French declaration of war in 1870, by quoting a letter written to Napoleon in 1866, by Persigny, one of his most crafty satellites. Such an article is hardly entitled to a response, but we will generously furnish our deluded critic with more recent French authorities.

In the debate which occurred in the French Chambers on the declaration of war, M. Thiers denounced the action of the Government in the following language:

The principal demand of the Government has been conceded. My conscience tells me I fulfil a duty in resisting imprudent passions and representing solely the country's interests. You are shedding torrents of blood for the question of form. I regard this war as an imprudence and ill chosen."

Upon the demand for the dispatches upon which such hasty action had been based, M. Ollivier was forced to admit that they had only received copies furnished by the Government spies, and in defending the declaration stated the grievance as follows:

"We will tell the whole truth. What we could not endure, was the semi-official communication to all Europe of the rejection of our Ambassador, and all the more significant, because done in the most courteous terms."

M. Theirs was not satisfied with this statement, and exposed its insufficiency in the following terms:

"If we had still to require the renunciation of the Hohenzollern candidature, I should be with you, but now that we have obtained that, we demand something else. You had not only sustained your request, you had form and substance both; you say Prussia has not yielded in form, and we have been insulted. Public opinion will turn against us. The Journals of Europe will be against us."

No one in France conceived the idea that Prussia was making war upon them, and the whole plan of the French campaign was laid out with a view to the prompt invasion of Prussian territory. Napoleon's armies were massed at the front before the Germans had time to concentrate, and he was only deterred from pushing across the Rhine, by delays necessitated through his anxiety to strengthen his foreign relations, to prevent the formation of what he most feared, such a hostile coalition of the Powers as had proved fatal to the First Empire. Long after Persigny's letter was written, the Prussian Government was importuned by him with all sorts of proposals for mutual aggrandizement at the expense of their weaker neighbors, and the refusal of these overtures was a principal cause of his enmity.

That Prussia has anticipated such an attack, and that she has been preparing to meet the assault when it should come, is well understood; but to assert that these facts render her responsible for the actual occurrence, is as absurd as it would be to charge an individual with complicity in the robbing of his own domicile, because he had suspected it and prepared himself to resist and repel the burglars.

Recognizing that Napoleon was entirely the aggressor in inaugurating an unnecessary war, we have sympathized with Prussia in the retribution which she has inflicted upon him, while, since the overthrow of his power, we have desired that Prussia should prove a generous conqueror and that the new Republic should be given a fair chance for its life.

Upon this point, Sir Henry Bulwer, in advocating the intervention of England, gives his views as to the terms upon which peace should be established rather than continue the useless carnage, which are similar to those hitherto expressed in our columns. He says:

"I do not believe victory is everything to Prussia, for, judging from the sobriety of mind she has hitherto displayed in this conflict, I hope she is superior to victory. She might, indeed, protest, and she would be right to protest, against any one-sided view of her case, or any attempt to say that her sacrifices in a war forced unjustifiably upon her were not to be fully counted. But I do not presume that England would ever commit this gross injustice. Her duty would be to hold the scales of equity with that equal hand which would prove her claim to be an umpire. Her part is to see and to say what is the least Prussia can ask without injustice to Germany, what is the most France can give up without disgrace to the French nation.

The De[illegible] is welcome to this final effort to set it right on a matter of contemporaneous history. We have little hope of convincing it, while it continues to exhibit a confusion of [illegible] is worthy of John Phoenix, when he was [illegible] that celebrated description of a victorious [illegible] onal encounter: "I held my adversary [illegible] down, by my nose, which I had insert[illegible] between his teeth for that purpose."

The said [illegible] the Census has been told, and the De[illegible] at bewails the scanty increase of our population in nearly two columns of leaded grief. Its editor, with a proud consciousness that a large proportion of his immediate constituents have liberally contributed towards a happier result, charges the responsibility upon radical mismanagement, and declares that the one great evil of excessive taxation has, both in the shipyard and the family, proved utterly disastrous in its effects upon home productions. We forbear commenting upon the meagre returns furnished by the domestic schedule of the writer referred to, as the assumption of marital obligations does not necessarily depend upon the volition of an individual, and a thoughtful regard for the political welfare of the rising generation of the rural Democracy, tends to reconcile us to the prospect of a lapse in the editorial dynasty of the Democrat.

PACIFIC RAILROAD AND STEAMSHIP LINES. A dispatch from San Francisco states that it is reported that the Northern Transportation Company has transferred its interests in the Hawaiian and Australian line to the Overland Railroad Company. It is understood that on Webb's line, Webb will represent the shipbuilding and shipowning interests; Sir George Gray, the former Governor of New Zealand, the English interest, and two prominent railroad men, the Overland railroad interest. The Southern Pacific, San Francisco and San Jose, and Santa Clara and Pazoro, and California Southern Railroad Companies are consolidated under the name of Southern Pacific Railroad.

TILTON-FULTON LIBEL CASE.

The N. Y. Tribune publishes an account of the origin and incidents of this quarrel substantially as follows:

About three years ago, Mr. Theodore Tilton and the Rev. Justin D. Fulton dined one day at Delmonico's (at company with some other gentlemen, and wine was on the table. [illegible] time after, when the Rev. Justin D. Fulton was in Boston, Mr. Tilton heard [illegible] Mr. Fulton had said in the course of a [illegible] sermon declare that he (Mr. Tilton) ad[illegible] that he took wine for his brain; the [illegible] that he advocated in the strongest [illegible] terms the stoppage by all persons of [illegible] intoxicating liquors as a beverage. [illegible] statements went the rounds of the [illegible] a few days ago, Mr. Tilton, while [illegible] New York, met a person who is described [illegible] worthy and well-known merchant, who, [illegible] ing to the danger of throwing stones [illegible] houses, informed Mr. Tilton that the [illegible] Mr. Fulton was humpoxing him for [illegible] that he took wine for his brain. [illegible] that he had never said so, [illegible] the merchant stated that the Rev. [illegible] a prominent advocate of total [illegible] had invited him into a lager-beer [illegible] the Bowery, after the delivery of [illegible] evening sermon at Dr. Armitage's [illegible] when they drank eight or ten glasses [illegible] Mr. Fulton consuming the larger [illegible] which facts he was ready to substan[illegible] as a just exposure of hypocrisy. [illegible] ished correspondence then ensued, [illegible] pearance of which Mr. Tilton claims [illegible] ceived the following note from the [illegible] who brought the lager beer accusa[illegible]

[illegible] regard to the libel suit with which [illegible] threatened by the Rev. Justin D. [illegible] Boston, on account of the statement made by me that he drank lager-beer in a saloon in the Bowery on a Sunday night, after preaching, I would say that I was the man who drank it with him, and that I stand ready to substantiate the same if you are held to answer. Do not use my name until it is absolutely necessary to do so."

A letter from one of the editors of the Boston Times is also published applauding Tilton for the exposure of Fulton, whom the writer says he believes is an arrant rogue, and Mr. Tilton states that his friend will prepare a full statement of the Bowery affair, and that he shall defend the libel.

It is but just to say that Mr. Fulton and his friends emphatically deny the charge against him, and that thus far the accusation on both sides rests solely upon individual assertion.

OBSERVANCES IN VIRGINIA ON THE DEATH OF GEN. LEE. On Thursday, Richmond, Va., presented a scene of mourning seldom witnessed. The stores and public buildings were all closed and bells were tolled in all parts of the city. Pictures of the deceased draped in crape and evergreens were hung upon many houses. A general desire was expressed that the deceased should be buried by the State, and the Legislature was guided by this wish in making the request of the family. In the afternoon Gov. Walker sent the following message to the Assembly:

With unaffected grief I announce to you the painful intelligence of the death of Robert E. Lee at Lexington, yesterday morning.—His died, as he had lived, a noble example of sublime principles and the teachings of the Christian religion. He goes down to the tomb amid the lamentations of an affectionate people. Of exalted public and private virtue, in his life and career he filled the full measure of our conception of a man. A stricken family, a bereaved State and an afflicted people bow with reverence and humility before this visitation of Divine Providence. It is fitting that you, the representatives of the people, should take such appropriate action as the melancholy occasion suggest, and I believe you would but give expression to the universal desire of the people should you solicit the interment of his remains upon grounds owned by the State at Hollywood Cemetery, where hereafter they may raise a monumental shaft commemorative alike of their sincere and lasting affection for the man and their profound appreciation of his greatness and goodness.

A joint resolution was unanimously passed, expressive of the deep sorrow of both Houses, and one requesting the body to be turned over to the State for interment, and a joint committee was also appointed to escort the remains.

The family of Gen. Lee have consented to the burial of his remains in Hollywood Cemetery in Richmond, on the section belonging to the State, and the remains were expected to reach there on Monday.

THE NEW CONGRESSMEN. From the latest reports, the Pennsylvania delegation stands as follows:

Dist.
1.	S. J. Randall, Democrat.
2.	J. Y. Creely, Republican.
3.	Leonard Myers, Rep.
4.	Wm. D. Kelley, Rep.
5.	A. C. Harmer, Rep.
6.	Caleb N. Taylor, Rep.
7.	W. Townsend, Rep.
8.	J. L. Getz, Dem.
9.	Oliver J. Dickey, Rep.
10.	J. W. Killinger, Rep.
11.	John B. Storms, Dem.
12.	L. D. Shoemaker, Rep.
13.	Ulysses Mercur, Rep.
14.	John B. Packer, Rep.
15.	R. J. Haldeman, Dem.
16.	John Cessna, Rep.
17.	D. J. Morrell, Rep.
18.	W. H. Armstrong, Rep.
19.	G. W. Scofield, Rep.
20.	Samuel Griffith, Dem.
21.	Andrew Stewart, Rep.
22.	James S. Negley, Rep.
23.	Eben. McJunkin, Rep.
24.	Joseph B. Donley, Rep.

This would make the delegation stand 19 Republicans to 5 Democrats—a Republican gain of one. The election of Armstrong, Morrell, Stewart and Cessna is not yet certain, though probable.

The Ohio delegation is likely to stand as follows:

Dist.
1.	A. T. Perry, Republican.
2.	Job Stevenson, Rep.
3.	L. D. Cambell, Democrat.
4.	J. F. McKenney, Dem.
5.	O. L. Lamison, Dem.
6.	J. A. Smith, Rep.
7.	S. Shellabarger, Rep.
8.	John Beatty, Rep.
9.	Charles Foster, Rep.
10.	W. F. Lockwood, Dem.
11.	J. T. Wilson, Rep.
12.	P. Van Trump, Dem.
13.	G. W. Morgan, Dem.
14.	James Munroe, Rep.
15.	W. P. Sprague, Rep.
16.	J. A. Bingham, Rep.
17.	J. A. Amber, Rep.
18.	W. H. Upson, Rep.

This gives the Republicans twelve Representatives to the Democrats six, the same as last year.

The Representatives from Indiana are reported to stand as follows:

Dist.
1.	W. E. Niblack, Democrat.
2.	M. C. Kerr, Dem.
3.	W. S. Holman, Dem.
4.	J. M. Wilson, Rep.
5.	J. Colburn, Rep.
6.	D. W. Voorhees, Dem.
7.	M. D. Mason, Dem.
8.	J. P. Tyner, Rep.
9.	J. P. C. Shanks, Rep.
10.	W. William, Rep.
11.	J. Packard, Rep.

This would give the Democrats a gain of one with Wilson in doubt.

Iowa will be represented in the next Congress by the following members—all Republicans:

Dist.		Dist.
1.	G. W. McCreary.	4.	Madison M. Walden.
2.	[illegible]	5.	Frank W. Palmer.
3.	W. G. Donnan.	6.	Jackson Orr.

Nebraska chooses John Taffee, Republican.

A STEAMSHIP DESTROYED BY FIRE. The Steamship Washington, which left Wilmington, N. C., yesterday took fire nine miles below the city and ran ashore on a point off Big Island. Her cargo consisted of about 700 barrels of spirits of turpentine, 300 bales of cotton and a few barrels of rosin. When the dispatch was sent the fire had burnt through the upper deck, and there was no doubt that the vessel would prove a total loss. One of the city fire companies with a steamer had been dispatched in the hope of saving a part of the cargo, which is fully insured.

The Sultan of Turkey will receive the next Spanish order of the Golden Fleece that becomes vacant.

The Boston Post publishes the following reply to a snarling editorial in the N. Y. World relative to the payment of the interest upon the war claims of Massachusetts:

The N. Y. World alludes to the payment of the long-standing claim of Massachusetts against the General Government in an unhappy and illiberal spirit. The payment that journal remarks, "strikes the reader oddly in contrast to the persistent repudiation by Congress of the claims of a Southern loyalists in the war of 1861." There is no analogy in the two cases, and no force whatever in the reasoning of the World, that because the Southern claims—which are of recent origin, and which there has hardly been an opportunity to investigate—have not been paid, the Massachusetts claim—which is as old almost as the memory of man, and which has been adjudicated and acknowledged over and over again, by one or the other of the Houses of Congress for a whole generation—shall remain unpaid. The Southern claimants might have reason to complain if they had waited as long for justice as Massachusetts has done. Without reference to the circumstances with which the World points its sarcasm, this claim is indisputably valid and just. The claim itself was allowed by Congress many years ago; and, by the way, it was through the personal efforts of Jefferson Davis that the claim, after so many years of fruitless application, was finally admitted and paid. The payment now in question is for interest which could hardly have been in justice withheld after the acknowledgement of the validity of the claim. The payment of this interest needs no excuse or apology. It is fully justified by the inherent deserts of the case. But there is something in the manner of it and in the use which is to be made of it, which adds gracefulness to the justice of the payment. The payment is made in live-year Government bonds, bearing a very low rate of interest, and the proceeds are to be appropriated to what may well be considered a national work of internal improvement.

The Flag on the Custom House at Savannah was placed at half-mast Thursday morning for the death of Gen. Lee, by order of one of the deputies without Collector Robb's knowledge. The Collector immediately ordered the Flag at full-mast, provoking much public feeling. He then telegraphed to Secretary asking Boutwell whether the flag should be lowered again and received a reply from the Secretary approving his action.

TROUPES,

Numbering 25 Artists from the Walhalla and Grand Academy, Berlin.

These strange and beautiful classic representations of this Troupe have been the theme of admiration in the Old and New world, and especially from the Crowned Heads of Europe. These delightful and original entertainments consist of artistic grouping of LIVING STATUARY, TABLEAUX VIVANTS.

Illustrating ancient and modern art, selected chiefly from Heathen Mythology and enhanced by the famous music of Germany. The numerous Tableaux are brilliantly illuminated with the Oxhydrogen Lime Light, and enriched by the addition of GORGEOUS COSTUMES AND APPROPRIATE ACCESSORIES.

ASTONISHING ACTS OF CLASSICAL GYMNASIA, by the greatest congress of Gymnasts that have ever made its debut in the United States. A grand display will be given each night of the Magnificent Pirouette.

Fountains of Gold and Silver Waters, of the Crystal Grotto of the Naiads,

In 3 Tableaux, Invented by Prof. Henrich Schmidt.

This unrivalled effort is on a scale of magnitude hitherto unattempted in the annals of Hydraulic Science, and is further enhanced by the fairy-like appearance of

LIVING FEMALE GROUPS,

SAVINGS BANK.

Deposits will be received at this Bank to and including SATURDAY, 15th inst., and interest allowed to commence Oct 1.

To illustrate the rapidity with which money accumulates at compound interest, take the following case:—In 1850, a deposit was made in this Bank. Last week the deposit book was brought in for the first time to have the dividends entered, when the deposit was found to have increased to more than two and one-fourth times the original amount, although for ten years only 5 per cent interest was paid, for two years 6 per cent, and two years 4 per cent.

The SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND of three and one-half per cent is now payable. The amount of the dividend so to be paid to depositors is about $11,000.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

The Battle at Orleans.

A Dispatch from King William

Bismarck's Terms of Peace

A STORMY CABINET MEETING IN ENGLAND.

RUMORED PRUSSIAN RETREAT FROM METZ.

A CURIOUS CANARD—THE PRUSSIANS REPORTED IN FULL RETREAT FROM PARIS.

French Success.

Great Uprising in Brittany.

OCCUPATION OF EPINAL.

Tours 11. A despatch from Epinal dated yesterday afternoon announces that the Prussians have entered that place. The citizens made a stout defense but were unable to resist the attacks of the enemy. The town was considerably damaged by the cannonade. It is reported that the Prussians seem to be falling back from this side of Orleans. They are no longer in Beaugency and Meung.—These towns are nearly 15 miles south of Orleans, and are the most extreme points in this direction yet reached by the enemy.

The troops which were sent forward to reinforce the 15th Corps and subsequently participated in the action near Orleans, are again arriving here. From the reports of their officers it seems that the losses sustained in the Orleans action were not so heavy as reported.

PARISIAN GUNNERY.

London, Oct. 14. One of the gunners on the Paris fortifications has particularly distinguished himself for the great accuracy with which he points his guns. He has thus far frustrated all the efforts of the Prussians to construct defensive works within the range of his guns. He is an Alsatian, named Christian. The authority reporting this mentions that the Prussians are not yet able to plant a single battery near enough to disturb any part of Paris.

A steady fire has recently been maintained from the forts of Mont du Valerien and D'Issy. The Prussians have been compelled to retreat from the line of these forts behind the Plateau of Meudon and St. Cloud.

The morale of the French soldiers is excellent. They are drilling constantly.

Wooden huts for the troops are arriving at the Prussian position before Metz.

THE CAPTURE OF ORLEANS ADMITTED.

London, Oct. 14. Advices from French sources admit that since six o'clock Tuesday evening the Prussians have held possession of Orleans. Their artillery was placed in strong position and drove the French beyond the Loire. Several houses in Orleans were destroyed by 24-pound shells before the occupation of the city.

A telegram dated Tours, Thursday night, says that a balloon containing Lefevre, Secretary of the French embassy at Vienna, has descended at Cambrai.

THE LATEST.—DISPATCH FROM KING WILLIAM

London, Oct. 14. The Queen has received the following dispatch from King William:

Thousands of prisoners fell into our hands as the result of Von Der Tann's victory near Orleans. The battle lasted from 9 o'clock in the morning to 7 in the evening, and was fought on difficult ground. The capture of Orleans was followed by a heavy loss to the French. Our loss was small."

BISMARCK'S TERMS OF PEACE.

London, Oct. 13. Bismarck has received representations from many quarters of Germany that the people are anxious for peace. Bismarck has authorized the Prussian Minister at Brussels to give the Great Powers to understand that Germany is willing to propose a settlement on a basis of the dismemberment of the frontier provinces, the rectification of the frontier line of the Rhenish provinces and a small money indemnification.

A stormy meeting of

THE BRITISH CABINET

the Marquis of Harrington demanded intervention for the integrity of French territory. Gen. Burnside returned to Versailles with

A REPLY TO BISMARCK'S PROPOSITION

to allow the elections, from Favre and other members of the Republic, that France would now devote herself to driving off the invaders and then would attend to domestic affairs.

GEN. BURNSIDE

reports that Paris is tranquil and confident of success. Provisions are in ample supply.—The fire from the forts inflict heavy losses upon the Germans. Sickness extensively prevails at Versailles.

The World's special at Ostend reports that the French won the advantage in and states the German loss at 7000 killed and wounded, besides great numbers of prisoners.

There are rumors at Namur of the intended retreat of the German forces at Metz upon the menaced French movement upon the main trunk of German communications.

London, Oct. 13. Gambetta telegraphs that he is assured that Paris is amply supplied with fresh meat. Gambetta also states that has voluntarily given in his adhesion to the Republic.

GEN. BAZAINE

PRUSSIANS AT PITHIVIERS.

London, Oct. 13. A large force of Prussians re-entered Pithiviers and treated the inhabitants brutally, yesterday. They then marched to Sanitary, 12 Kilometres beyond Orleans, toward Blois. At Sanitary 1500 cavalry made a requisition upon the place.

A decree of the government at Tours authorizes the Prefect at Fontainebleau to save objects of art and value at the palace. Lists of the articles hidden or removed are to be kept.

The Greek Charge D'Affaires has arrived at Tours from Paris, having obtained permission to cross the Prussian lines.

It is reported that two delegates have arrived from the Paris Government with instructions for Gambetta.

The Prefect of Vernon announces the entrance at Gisors of 3000 Prussians with artillery, commanded by Prince Albert. They are awaiting the arrival of more troops, with which they will march upon Rogen.

The Prefect of Colmar announces that the siege of New Brisach still continues. The town is completely surrounded by heavy detachments of Prussians, well supplied with artillery. They are making enormous requisitions of supplies upon the surrounding country.

A STRANGE RUMOR—THE PRUSSIANS REPORTED IN FULL RETREAT FROM PARIS.

London, Oct. 14. A dispatch from Tours, dated the 14th, received by the Provisional Government via carrier pigeon, states that the Prussians are in full retreat from Paris. The enthusiasm in Paris is indescribable.

LYONS PREPARED.

Tours, Oct. 14. Reliable information has just been received by mail from Lyons, showing that the city is amply prepared to resist any force the Prussians can send against it. The heights near the city have been strongly fortified. Entrenched camps have been constructed and heavy guns placed in position.—The entire population is armed and are drilling day and night. Large numbers of Franc Tireurs and Mobiles have reached Lyons.—There are troops enough there now for an army and they may be easily organized to act on the offensive. All symptoms of disorder have disappeared from that city and throughout the north of France. The situation is now accepted uncomplainingly.

Also a new Quadrille, "Put me in my little Bed."

—Mr. James J. H. Gregory, of Marblehead, Mass., will give a course of lectures on "Market Farming and Gardening," before the students of the State College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts, at Orono, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M. on Tuesday, 18th inst. The lectures are public and farmers and other interested are cordially invited to attend.

—We are reminded of a remarkable guess made by G. Washington (or somebody else) which ran as follows: "Time flies." And what reminds us of it is the appearance of the "Old Farmer's Almanac" for 1871, or more properly, Almanacs, for we received yesterday no less than five—two from Bailey & Noyes, Portland, two from Loring, Short & Harmon, Portland, and one from Brewer & Tileston, Boston. Thanks gentlemen.

—Northern Lights.—One of the most gorgeous displays of the Northern Lights ever seen in this latitude was visible last evening. Between 6 and 8 o'clock the whole northern heavens were draped in fiery light, above which lambent flashes of a pale blue, darted to and fro in the extreme zenith. Hundreds of people watched this glorious exhibition of nature's fireworks to a late hour. In high northern latitudes these displays of color are frequent, but they are rarely visible with us in such splendor.

THE WALHALLA AND DIOPLASTIC TROUPE. The performance of the above named troupe in Norumbega Hall last evening was followed by a comparatively small house, people some having the idea that it was an off-shoot of the "leg-drama." This is a mistake, as there was nothing in the exhibition which could be deemed objectionable. The tableaux were very fine, the gymnastic performances better, than any exhibited in Bangor for years, and the "prismatic fountain," at the close, magnificent. The company performs here three more evenings, and will no doubt receive crowded houses during the rest of their stay.

—Large delegations from Rising Virtue and St. Andrew's Lodges, and St. John's Commandery, K. T., left this city at half past two o'clock yesterday afternoon to be present at the dedication of the new Masonic Hall at Orono. They were accompanied by the Bangor Cornet Band, and made a fine appearance as they marched through the streets from the Masonic Temple to the Railroad station.

A BUSY DAY.—The workmen at the steam mill of Messrs. Blunt, Hinman & Co., feeling extra smart one day this week, made an effort to see how much work could be done, with the following results:

Thomas Shea and crew sawed 61,301 feet of three and four inch spruce planks with one Emerson moveable tooth rotary saw. One gang-saw turned out 44,120 feet of spruce, one and two inches thick, and one single saw turned out 7,000 feet of spruce boards and plank. The work was done without previous preparation, and the mill was run only eleven and one-half hours.

ROGUE CAPTURED. Some three or four weeks since a man named Thomas J. Kelley, alias Thomas J. Cunningham, broke into a stable in Hyde Park, Mass., and stole therefrom a horse, buggy, harness, robes, &c. The horse, which was owned by David Curry of Boston, was valued at $3,000, being a fast trotter, and the buggy, &c., was also valuable. Kelley drove the horse at a very rapid rate some 40 or 50 miles the same night, and left him at Billerica, where the next morning he died from exhaustion. Kelley made his escape, though two accomplices were arrested. The case was put into the hands of State Detective H. D. Littlefield and Constable Jordan of Hyde Park. Kelley's wife, who resided in that town, was closely watched, and a day or two since, it was discovered that she had sent a valise by express to this city, where Kelley formerly resided. The officers followed with such dispatch that they arrived before the valise did, and making arrangements with Mr. Hammett, agent of the Eastern Express, and City Marshal Wingate, they saw all the developments. Yesterday afternoon, Kelley walked into the Express office for the valise, having previously sent a man in to see that the coast was clear) and was immediately arrested by Mr. Littlefield. A requisition for Kelley from the Governor of Massachusetts, has been issued, and he will be taken to Hyde Park to-day.

—The Saco Independent says that Friday night of last week, Mr. Aaron Webster, of Buckfield, a man about sixty-five years of age, while laboring under temporary derangement, disappeared from his place of business. The citizens turned out and began a thorough search. He was found Sunday in the woods about four miles from the village, completely exhausted, having had no food nor shelter for forty-eight hours. He is still deranged and his recovery is still considered doubtful.

—The semi-annual session of the Grand Lodge of Good Templars of Maine was held in Farmington, on Wednesday, about one hundred delegates being present. Rev. Smith Baker, Jr., Grand Worthy, Chief Templar, presided. H. A. Shorey of Bridgton, Grand Secretary, presented his report, showing 200 Lodges in the State with a membership of 12,000. Resolutions were passed in favor of a State Police. It was decided to hold the annual session next April in Portland.—Wednesday evening a public temperance meeting was held at Farmington, which was addressed by various persons.

—Monday night, and affectionate husband in Augusta, threw a lighted kerosene lamp at his wife, and it is to be hoped, better, half—Benzine liquor was at the bottom of the affair.

—N. H. Morry is erecting a large building at Boothbay harbor for stores, a large public hall, and a Masonic hall.

—The Times learns that parties in Bath are contemplating a short course of lectures for the coming winter, to be delivered by young men who were born in Bath.

—A lodge of Good Templars was organized in Bowdoinham on Saturday evening, to be called Bowdoinham Lodge.

—The Eastport Sentinel says that the business of making pumice from small heating of Lubec has been very profitable this season. The price is so high that the farmers do not find it so much to their gain to buy it as formerly. The price at Lubec is $14 a ton.

—The new high school building in Gardiner is rapidly approaching completion. It is one of the finest looking educational edifices in the State, says the Kennebec Journal.

—Aug. Gus Crummitt, one of the persons who was killed by a boiler explosion at Lowell on Tuesday, was 19 years old and belonged in Canaan, in this State.

—Dr. Emerson, from Belfast, who was on his way to Buffalo, to see his son, was robbed in a liquor shop in Boston, Tuesday, of $1,200 by a liquor dealer named Lambert, to whom the Doctor had imprudently exposed his money. Lambert was arrested.

—At the Boston express train leaving Portland at 6 o'clock was passing through Elliot on Tuesday evening, some scoundrel threw a stone threw the window of one of the cars, which just missed striking the heads of a couple of ladies near the window, says the Portland Press.

—Plaisted, who was arraigned and pleaded guilty of setting fire to the dwelling house of Mr. Welch in York, was sentenced by Judge Danforth to State Prison for life.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL

Lord St. Leonard, whose death was prematurely reported in London, yesterday, still lives.

The Republicans of the Worcester (Mass) District on Thursday nominated Geo. F. Hoar for Representative to Congress by acclamation, and a resolution endorsing Mr. Hoar's course in the National House of Representatives was unanimously adopted.

A general court martial, of which General O. O. Howard is President, has been ordered to convene at West Point on the 20th instant for the trial of Cadets J. W. Smith, (colored) John W. Wilson, Wm. S. Davis and Geo. W. Hagin.

The Tammany General Committee held a crowded meeting in Tammany Hall, New York Thursday night, and elected delegates to the city and county conventions, after which addresses were delivered by Richard O'Gorman and Mayor Hall. The former defended the acts of the Tammany Administration including the Erie Classification Bill. Mayor Hall said that the recent census would defraud the city of 45,000 votes.

THE STORM IN ENGLAND. The telegraph reports that heavy showers prevailed in the mill region of Lancashire, raising the streams and causing disastrous freshets. The shipping in the river Mersey was badly damaged. No American losses are yet reported. The land telegraph lines throughout Ireland were prostrated, delaying and disorganizing the Atlantic cable service. Liverpool has already voted a relief to the sufferers in that region.

SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT—OCTOBER TERM.

APPLETON, Chief Justice, Presiding.

Thursday, Oct. 13, 1870.

Inhabitants of Yeazie vs. Inhabitants of Orono.

This action which has been in the Court since Monday morning, to determine the settlement of a pauper, went to the jury to-day at 12 o'clock. At 9 o'clock evening the Jury agreed upon a verdict for defendants and that the settlement of the pauper was in Bangor previous to the incorporation of Yeazie.—Rawson, McCrillis. Peters, N., Wilson.

Mary Stevens vs. Levi Stevens.

Libel for divorce. Cause, drunkenness and desertion, for 10 years. Divorce decreed.—Custody of children given to the mother. Piper.

Georgiana Fraser vs Nathaniel Fraser.

Libel for divorce. Cause, desertion since 1865. Divorce decreed. Custody of child given to the mother. Simpson.

Charlotte L. Brown, libl't, vs. Hayden Brown.

Libel for divorce. Cause, cruelty, ill-temper, personal violence and beating—obliging her to leave her husband for safety.—Divorce decreed. Custody of child given to mother, and alimony $25 a year. Sprague.

D. Barker.

Frederick M. Rodgers & al vs. Walter K. Spofford.

An action upon account for blacksmithing. Defendant sets up a settlement and note given which he paid and produced. Plaintiff replies that note was given for borrowed money and not in settlement of the account in suit. Verdict for defendant. Simpson. Peters & Wilson.

ON TRIAL.

John T. Averill vs schooner Eddie F. Treat.

An action upon a lien claim against the vessel for repairs, amounting to $126,05. Defence, that charges are excessive, and that the plaintiff has lost his lien by neglect to attach seasonably. T. W. Vose. A. Sanborn.

DECISIONS IN LAW CASES.

Lewis F. Stanton vs. George W. Edmunds & al.

"Verdict set aside, new trial granted unless defendants will consent that judgment may be entered against them for $103." Peters & Wilson.

Alex. C. McIntosh vs. H. C. Hall & legs. Paine.

"Judgment for Plff. vs. Hall, and that Plff. has no lien upon the logs attached." Mace & Laughton. Peters & Wilson.

WAR NOTES

The London journals predict calamities to Germany if she perseveres in insisting on the cession of Alsace and Lorraine and continuing the war. They say that if Paris holds out several months, an immense army will be formed behind its walls while others will be created in the Departments. Thus the Prussians will be caught between two overwhelming forces.—The savage character that the war is assuming in burning villages and shooting scores of peasants for defending their homesteads, is causing a violent revulsion of feeling in England.—Tours is becoming a rendezvous for Republicans from All parts of the world.—The English apprehend a general European convulsion and the Prussians are incurring the general indignation in that country for provoking danger. England is quietly preparing for the storm. While refusing to augment her military expenses the Government is putting her sea-coast defences in impregnable condition.—The London journals give the results of the experiments just made on the improvement in the torpedo system, showing that no hostile fleet can ever touch English shores. England is spending large sums for strengthening her sea-coast defences, the south-east coast, especially occupying her attention. The entrance of the Thames is being fortified in a manner not only calculated to repel invasion but to render impossible the disembarkation of the enemy. Sheerness will be strengthened by fresh forts and additional batteries of artillery of the largest calibre. Important defensive works are in process of erection. New Haven and Liverpool, so many years neglected, will be put in a state of complete defence.—A correspondent at Rouen writes that the French seaport towns are resisting all exportations of cattle and provisions to England. This violent proceeding is dictated by prudence.—The Tours Government has issued a decree for the purpose of stimulating all ranks to enter the army and to encourage young talent, making appointments and advancements according to the talent displayed on services rendered. The former rules stopped such advancement, but the military grades may be conferred upon persons not belonging to the regular army. These grades are to cease at the end of the war, except in cases of unusual eclat or great services rendered. It is decreed that the workmen in the Government armories and arsenals will not be forced into military service. They must, however, form companies and drill, but so as not to interfere with their work.

AN ENGLISH PRINCESS TO MARRY A SUBJECT OF THE QUEEN. The preliminaries of the marriage between the Princess Louisa and the Marquis of Lorne, eldest son of the Duke of Argyle, have been arranged with the consent of the Queen. It is considered that the possibility of the Princess succeeding to the crown is too remote to render the alliance dangerous. The Pall Mall Gazette confirms the above and alludes to it as a fact without a recent precedent.

CLASSIC HAIR-DRESSES.—The arrangement of the hair and the decoration of the head have in all ages been objects of great attention among young females. The Jews, originally a pastoral people, acquired, in time, the method of ornamenting the person through intercourse with the Egyptians and the Assiatic nation. There are no known Jewish monuments to which we can refer, but with the Egyptians, whom they imitated, shaving the head and the use of artificial hair were customary. In one ancient Egyptian figure the only ornament is a fillet encircling the head; in another, feathers variegated with green and red surmount the headdress; an artificial locust, fixed in a golden shape, forms part of the ornaments; a golden fillet binds the hair, which is black, the ornament of which hangs over the shoulder, is of lilac and gold, and the coiffure is elegantly worked. The information of antiquity to which we can refer on this subject is the Greeks, and the graceful taste of the Grecian ladies is eminently conspicuous in the adornment of the head. A fillet, as appears from ancient sculpture and paintings, women wore their hair descending partly before and partly behind in a number of long separate locks. A little later it grew into a fashion to collect the whole of the hair hanging down the back into a single broad stream, by means of a ribbon, and only to have in front only a few separate locks. Later still, the former was doubled up, while the side locks only reached as low as the bosom, which finally gave way to ringlets, leaving the neck uncovered. So neatly was the hair arranged, according to classic descriptions, as sometimes to resemble the cells of a bee-hive, and at others waves and undulations, supported by wirework. Ladies reckoned among the ornaments of the head the diaries or crescent formed diadem, ribbons, rows of beads, wreaths of flowers, netting, studs, and grasshoppers innumerable. The Roman ladies followed to a certain extent the fashions of the Greeks, but they seem rarely to have worn the tiara or the net to support the hair. Their mode of dressing the hair was less elegant but more elaborate, being frequently arranged in a vast number of small curls. The Roman ladies, whose hair was generally black, were extremely fond of lightening and curling hair which was brought to Rome from Germany and the northern parts of Europe. The Roman ladies, says Strutt, not only anointed their hair with rich perfumes, but sometimes they painted it; they also made it appear of a bright yellow color by the assistance of wash, as made for the purpose. They raised it to a great height by rows of curls, to which false hair was added, completing the lofty pile. We need only add that the hair of the married women was divided to distinguish them from the unmarried; that it was adorned with ornaments of pearl, gold and precious stones, and sometimes with garlands and chaplets of flowers; it was also bound with ribbons and fillets of various colors.

VALUABLE

Timber Lands

And Mill Property

FOR SALE.

THE subscriber, desirous of disposing of all his interest in Timber Lands and mills, will sell on favorable terms the following lots:

One-Half Township No. 5, Range 4, Oxford County.

The whole township contains twenty-six thousand (26,000) acres, is heavily timbered with spruce, estimated at sixty to eighty millions, all of which stands within near and easy hauling distance of the Magalloway river or its branches, which runs through the town, or Parmachenna Lake, which is embraced within its limits.

Also 10,000 Acres of Land in the Town of Byron, Oxford Co., well covered with large Spruce timber. Swift River and its branches run through these lands and empty into the Androscoggin below Rumford Falls.

Also 1100 Acres Timber and Wood Land in Town of Gorham, N. H.

two miles above the Alpine House, on the line of the Grand Trunk Railroad, and the banks of the Androscoggin River. There is a large quantity of wood on these lots which, from its proximity to the Railroad, is steadily increasing in value.

Also 2500 Acres Lands in the Towns of Albany and Stoneham, near the village of North Waterford, Oxford County. This land is covered with thrifty sapling Pine timber, standing near Crooked River, which runs through the land. Logs put into Crooked river can be run to Sacarappa, or by hauling four to five miles they can be put into the Saco. There is a good mill privilege, with a single saw mill on the river; distance to the canal at Harrison ten miles; to the railroad at South Paris twelve miles. The land is valuable for sheiding purposes after being cleared of timber.

Also 435 Shares of Stock in the Lewiston Steam Mill Company, the whole capital stock being represented by 877 shares. The property of the company consists of a Steam Saw Mill, capable of manufacturing five million feet of long lumber, with a proportionate amount of clapboards, shingles and laths. About fifteen acres land in the city of Lewiston, well located for building purposes and thirty thousand acres of timber land, well located on the Androscoggin river and its branches, from which but a small quantity of the timber has been cut.

THE WIFE'S BECAUSE

BY ELIZABETH PRODTA.

It is not because your heart is false—true only
Unto some angel's—
Not because you chose me, weak and lonely,
For your owner;
Not because the earth is fair, and the skies
Spread Above you,
Are more valiant for the stilling of your eyes,
That I love you!

It is not because the world's popular meaning
Grows more clear,
And the parapets of heaven, with angels thronging,
Seem more near;
And nature sings of praise with all her voices
Since yours spoke,
Since with my silent heart that now rejoices,
Love awoke!

Nay, not even because your hand looks here and there
At your will,
Soothing, hushing all the discord, making earth—
Earth—music still!
Teaching trust to fold her wings, nor even roam
From her nest;
Teaching Love that her secured, safe home
Must be rest.

But because this human love, though true and sweet—
Yours and mine—
Has been sent by Love more tender, more complete,
More divine!
That it leads our hearts at rest at last in heaven,
Far above you!
Do I take the one gift that God has given—
And I love you!"

THE TRUE DOCTRINE OF DIVINE SOVEREIGNTY.

SERMON.

BY HENRY WARD BEECHER.

[The following sermon, by one of our most distinguished American clergymen, is published at the request of several prominent gentlemen, and we trust that it will prove of sufficient general interest to warrant this departure from our custom. Ed.]

"Every one that is called by my name, for I have created him for my glory; I have formed him, yea, I have made him." I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins."—Isaiah xlii. 7, 25.

All theology undergoes a vigorous change, through the inspired pages, analogous to the changes of men's opinions and beliefs in other matters. For, as our common secular beliefs are much affected by our religious belief so our religious beliefs in itself more or less affected by our secular belief. It were easy to show that our knowledge, and that the doctrine of the human mind, its natural laws, its education, its methods, its disorders, and its remedies, underlie almost the whole edifice of human belief except in pure physical science.

Our beliefs respecting man will determine our methods of education and government. Mental philosophy, applied to our religious nature, is a theology. For theology is nothing but a particular department of mental philosophy—the science of the divine mind and the science of governing human minds. Mental philosophy developed in regard to social relations constitutes ethics, or the science of social duties. Mental philosophy applied to questions of communities and their management is the doctrine of government; for civil government among men is often all but a mental problem, multiplied.

The following things have happened:

1. In attempting to explain and enforce divine government, men have always brought to their reasonings on this great and transcendently important subject the ideas of their own time, respecting mental philosophy and the science of human government. The forms of government under which men had lived, which they had been taught to believe was of divine authority, and to which they epitomized the radical notions of authority and obedience—these have determined pretty much the opinions of men respecting the divine government, and so the divine administrative character.

2. As men's views of human governments have undergone gradual changes through the lapse of ages, and their notions of the human mind have become clearer and more thorough, the theological expositions founded upon a ruder notion of government and mind have lost their hold and power upon thinking men, and they have lost their faith in certain doctrines of religion long before they gave them up. How thinking men pass through that state in which things held to be true cease with them to have the force of truth, and gradually crumble under their handling! And it is along time before men can say to themselves, "I do not believe what my fathers believed." If a man be conscientious and final, it frequently constitutes one of the most poignant experiences of his life when he, at a later period, takes a more advanced view and forsakes the less disclosed view of his fathers. But the fact remains that, long before men really are changed above ground, they are changed in reality; because those sources from which knowledge and faith come in the present time have changed; their philosophy and their views have changed, and they can not any longer hold those views that depend upon a very contrary theory, as they had held them.

3. It will also now be easily understood how the same great fact or religious truth may remain in authority from age to age, and yet the theological statement of that truth, the grounds of its defense or illustration, may utterly change. In other words, there may be a transformation of theology, while the subject-matter out of which all theologies are made will have a certain sameness and variety from beginning to end. And this fact illustrates another fact of great importance—namely, that the same truth may be held in its integrity under a great many forms and with a great many different expressions.

Suppose a man had been brought up to believe that there was but one single way of generating ten, and that was multiplication by saying "Twice five are ten." By and by a man comes along and broaches a heresy, and says to "You can get ten by additions well as by multiplication." That is a new and strange notion. He does not believe it at first. It is anism, perhaps. But at last he believes that five added to five will make ten. And there he stands, till some smart man comes from the schools and says: "Yes, and nine and one make ten; or, eight and two make ten; or, seven and three make ten; or, six and four make ten." "And here turn out," says the man, "five ways of making ten." "Yes, and why not? Why not fifty? What is there incompatible in that?" We smile when a man raises such a question in arithmetic, but because the factors are different in generating a moral result, men seem to think that the true, the formative process has been abandoned. The philosophical statements, the modes of rendering thought, these change with changing education and habits and thoughts and feelings; whereas the central substance of truth, around about which they have all played, and from which they have all derived their vital inspiration, not only remains, but they hold it and believe in it. And there be many men in many seats of common Christianity who suppose themselves to be in radical antagonism. And they are about the clothes of truth; but they hold the truth itself in common.

Perhaps no other doctrine can so well illustrate this view in all its parts as this very doctrine of divine sovereignty, one aspect of which has been set forth in our text. God created men for his own glory. He pardons men for his own sake. He deals with them first according to natural law, and does it for his own sake, and then according to moral law, and does it for his own sake. God creates men, and asserts his moral power, his absolute sovereignty, and his right to govern in the way that is best, he himself being judge of what is best and taking counsel of none other.

That there is one God; that he is supreme; that he governs by laws of his own and by fresh and continuous will-impulses of his own; that he is independent; that he consults none, and, unlike a limited monarch, executes his own purposes, and not the will of his subjects; the great truth of the existence, power, absolute supremacy of one God—this has remained. From the earliest dawnings of religion in patriarchal days down to this period of philosophizing there has been this center and core of religious thought that seems to have undergone almost no eclipse. Men have from that time to the present believed in one eternal, sovereign, wise, just, and governing God. And yet the doctrine of sovereignty has not been the same doctrine everywhere. Men have held to this central substance of truth; but the exposition and doctrine of it have always varied.

For example, in a patriarchal age Jehovah God was declared to be supreme; men understood, as their highest conception of supremacy, that God was the chief, or the patriarch, and all his relations were patriarchal or paternal. And they must of necessity have conceived of the supremacy and sovereignty of God as of the relations of a father in some way to a multiplex family. When chiefs became kings, and kings became absolute, human ideas, following changed notions of supremacy had a new doctrine of the rights of kings. Then gradually, when these things had been radicated in society, land generations had been brought up to feel that kings were a certain something that God made on purpose, and put separate from all others into the world, to govern the race, and made sure divine kings—when men had believed these things for a long time, and incorporated them into their faith, it was impossible but that they should form their conception of the sovereignty of God from their idea of sovereignty in an earthly monarch, and that would be different from the conception of the supremacy of a patriarchal chief.

When the so-called divine right of kings had almost removed from men the notion that subjects had rights; when it was almost thought that the only thing men were born for was to be material for kings to manipulate; when kings learned, as they did at some periods, to represent the essence and sum total of mankind; when it was supposed that past generations of men were mere tributaries running into this ocean, and that the king in such an age as that, how could there be a notion of God's supremacy and sovereignty that should not be licentious, tyrannic, exclusive, distasteful, selfish, enormously wicked? And so we have yet registered certain notions of God's absolute sovereignty—of what he did, of what he determined to do, and of why he did it—that shock every sensibility of persons educated by the New Testament. And these extreme views of God's sovereignty were derived from notions of authority as represented in absolute monarchies.

But as time rolled on, and democratic tendencies worked their way up into power, kings were at a discount, and the common people began to be regarded, and to be lifted up, with their many heads crowned with new sovereignty. When it began to be taught that the source of power and authority was the right could not that be that a modifying influence would be felt in regard to the doctrine of divine sovereignty; that there would not be so much emphasis put on God's doing what he pleased; that there would begin to be more thought as to not only man's duties, but as to the duties of a just and benevolent Father, as to what he has bound himself, by the laws of his nature, to do for helpless, dependent subjects. It could not but be that there would be a question of the rights of subjects in theology, as in civil policy. And if such a tendency is met with rebuff and treating as heretic; if men think by stealth, if their convictions are dammed up, then at last when they do break down the barrier, and flow big, they will be like a devastating freshet. Truth is almost always innocuous in its development if you give it freedom; but, if men think in secret, by stealth, as if it were a crime, afterward they come in reformations of old bad thinkings with terrible violence and force. It was the repression that made it so bad.

Why, God made a teakettle to sing when the water that is in it boils; and if you put down the lid, so that it shall not sing, it will not for a few moments. But it will give you thunder when it explodes. It would be perfectly harmless if you would let it alone, and give it the liberty that belongs to it.

So of thinking. If it be not permit to think, if a man is held to the judgment-seat of God, if he is searched by argument, then no harm comes of it. Give me argument. It is that which makes investigation easy, temperate, and almost without tradition. And while many of the evils of the church have been evils of heresy, the reason why they have been such evils is that men would not let them come in. If they had let them come in, they would have gone out without harm, being clothed with a fictious power. If, then, it be true that our ideas of divine government, of religion, and of God himself are powerfully affected by our judgments of human government, it is no less true that our experience and philosophy of government and society will powerfully, in turn, influence our conceptions of theology.

Now, there is a very offensive way of representing God as acting for his own sake.—We feel it is designed to leave the impression that God has a right to be indifferent to the interests, feelings, and desires of his subjects, as if his law, or his invisible and future kingdom, were something so much greater, better and brighter than sinful men that, if he pleased, he would have a right to overturn all thought from sinful men and fix his mind on his law; whereas it is stated that God has a right to disregard his subjects, as if they were not worth his consideration, I cannot conceive how at the same time a God can be presented to our view that we can receive with love and confidence or worship. I know that it has been said and believed that men sinned, and that by sin they voided all their rights. It may be true of individual cases; it may be true of a given race, but that does not warrant the supposition at all this race of men have been put upon the earth, and that God with infinite knowledge and foresight has continued to reproduce and augment the ratio of creation, year after year, and that nations, generations, numbers uncountable, in one vast, endless stream, have been rolling on and down toward eternity. And to say that God has a right to continue being and to augment the being of men that have no rights before him, because they sin and will sin, and he knows they will sin; is to present a view of God that perplexes the common mind, and that it seems to me must shake the strongest mind.

I am free to say that what are called the "hyper-Calvinistic" views of God—views that represent that God, by decrees of reprobation without any foresight of their good or evil, but simply for the purposes of his own glory or pleasure, expressly to damn them, and that that damnation consists in moral perversion by which forever and forever and forever they are to hate good, and love wickedness, and revile, and blaspheme, and quarrel with, and contend against lawful government—I am free to say that these are views with which I have no sympathy. Why, to teach that God lets up engines of being that never are to run down, and that he forgets to work with augmenting productiveness in the direction of that which God hates, and to teach that he does it all for the purpose of demonstrating his own sovereignty, and for his own glory, this is to make men detest such a sovereignty and to abhor such a sovereign. There can be no such doctrine as this that any doctrine springing from the Gospel of Christ, or the love of Christ, or the example of Christ will not shrink in judgment upon and condemn.

Therefore, if there be any present who entertain such a view of God as this, let me ask them to go back as far as they can toward the beginning of time, towards the earliest records of history, where we have lifted up before us an idea of God so perfect, so sublime, so exquisite in every line and lineament and detail, that strange as it may seem, no touch of beauty can be added to it. Our latest and profoundest moral musings will not carry us one step in advance of that notion of God, which was propounded to Moses almost in the beginning of the world, at the outset of his legislative career.

"The Lord, the Lord, Jehovah, strong and merciful, and abundant in goodness and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity, transgression, and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and to the fourth generations."

I never meet this sublime utterance in the Bible. It is up there in more stately and magnificent than any piece of architecture, than the most enormous and artistic cathedral. I behold, when I see this utterance, that the glory of God rests in his goodness and long-suffering and abundant goodness, and that as you still look he shows it more and more, and keeps it till no man knows it in generations and generations, and that all this is not a mere sentiment or good nature, but is based and founded upon immutable love and justice, and truth—so he will have to end by no means clear the guilty. Truth is truth, and God will vindicate its rights as right, and God will take care of it; justice is justice, and God will and must stand upon an immutable foundation. He will make his truth and justice and eternal justice for an theme. But by them, and through them, and for them he lifts up this resplendent glory of love, and sparing mercy, and wonderful forbearance. And where else is there so much put into small space, and put in such order and balance as here? And the one who think that our idea of God is imperfect must be puzzled. I think, to find one as perfect. In the very beginning of human knowledge as perfect a conception of God is to be found as is to be found in the latest days.

2. When it is designed to leave the impression that God is so great that he has a right to do what it would be wicked for any other one to do, the doctrine of God's sovereignty is presented in a way to make it offensive, and in a way that rarely cannot stand. It is the most dangerous doctrine I can conceive of—that doctrine that quantity of being relieves from moral obligations. Hitherto we with quality, not with quantity. God has a right to do what he pleases; but it is on account of his moral quality. It is right that that which is perfectly equitable should have a chance to make justice. That which is perfectly good has infinite rights. That which is perfectly true has infinite rights. Perfect wisdom, perfect love, perfect justice, perfect sympathy, perfect suffering, and self-denial for others—these have a right to reign supreme. Heaven acclaims it, earth acclaims it, and even hell must needs groan consent. And God is sovereign; universal, absolute and unquestionable, simply because he is so much better than men, than saints, than angels, than thrones and dominions and powers, that he would stoop from goodness and lessen it, if he should take counsel of any. But to say that we must be for certain things because we are little men, and that God may do them because he is a great God, is to confound moral distinctions in their sources. That is, so that as is wicked in me because it was first wicked in God. If it is right in him, my justification does not make it wrong in me. All the laws which he has imposed upon us he took out of his own soul to give to us. He commands us to be what he is, and made us much in his image as that we might understand and come into sympathy with the movement of his reason, of his conscience, and of his love. God has commanded us to follow him, and his footsteps are his laws. What he is and what he does, enables us what we may do and what we may do.

Now to say that it is criminal for a man, as a private citizen, to do things that God has a right to do, because he is God and is greater than we are—what is this but teaching under bloody words and with some sort of rainbow colors, the bold doctrine that might makes right. Is there any doctrine more detestable and more mischievous than that God is sovereign, and may do as he pleases, and he is justified in all that he does simply because he is so great, because he is so infinite?

I say that being is responsible in the ratio of its magnitude. That is to say, the vaster the sphere, the richer the endowment, the more potential the attributes, the greater according to this doctrine of love, which is declared to be the key-note of scripture, alone, but of government and of the universe, is the obligation that one is under; and not to you and me, but to God himself as in himself is the very nature of being; to truth and law.

3. When the doctrine of divine sovereignty is so stated as that it produces the impression that God is not a God of will—which we believe—but of willfulness, not a being of reasonable nature, but of caprice; it is misstated, and the true doctrine is obscured. This is orientalism. No person can have read those very profitable discourses called the "Arabian Nights Tales" without getting a clear insight into Oriental notions of government. If you make a man a prince, make him rich enough, and that is the end. If he puts on a man's head, it is enough to say that he is a prince. That ends all controversy. If he confiscates a man's estate, it is enough to say that he is a prince. Being a prince, it is supposed that he is at liberty to act, according to his anger or caprice. That is the Oriental notion of power. And there have been unconstrainedly more or less such attributions to God as sovereign. And, when it is declared that he acts of his own gloriously pleasant, men have thought of him as sitting on a divan, gorgeously arrayed, and saying: "Here I am; and nobody can get up here to harm me; and I will do as I please. And if any man murmers, I will send a thunderbolt after him, and that will fix him. And if any man rebels, I will crush him, and that will fix him. I can do it; and therefore I will do it." Now, what kind of a God is that? who says, "I will do so and so because I can?" and who, with a sweeping through the ages with feet wet with the blood of those, that he has trampled and crushed, and with no reason except "I can; I will, and will not be questioned?" He is a tyrant. And tyranny when it is made supreme, is wantonness. And to say that such a being is to be revered and worshipped is to make all ideas of right. You may surround it with the halo of glory as much as you please, and make it as admirable as you please, and the fundamental element of truth and justice will rule out such a character as that. No man could worship such a God; or, if he did, the more religion he had the worse he would be.

OFFICIAL

LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Passed by the Second Session of the Forty-first Congress.

By the President of the United States of America:

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas satisfactory evidence has been received by me from His Majesty the Emperor of France, through the Count Favenay, his Charge d'Affaires, that on and after the date of the discriminating duties heretofore levied in French ports upon merchandise imported from the countries of its origin in vessels of the United States, ceased to be discontinued and abolished;

Now, therefore, I, U. S. Grant, President of the United States of America, by virtue of the authority vested in me by an act of Congress of the 7th day of January, 1824, and by an act in addition thereto of the 24th day of May, 1828, do hereby, declare and proclaim that on and after the date, so long as merchandise imported from countries of its origin in French ports in vessels belonging to citizens of the United States is admitted into French ports on the terms aforesaid, the discriminating duties heretofore levied upon merchandise imported from countries of its origin into French ports in vessels belonging to citizens of the United States shall be, and are hereby, discontinued and abolished.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this twelfth day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and of the Independence of the United States of America the ninety-third.

[L. S.] U. S. GRANT.

By the President:

HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State.

By the President of the United States of America:

A PROCLAMATION.

In pursuance of the provisions of the act of Congress approved April 10th, 1869, I hereby designate Tuesday, the 30th day of November, as the time for submitting the constitution adopted on the 15th day of May, 1868, by the convention which met in Jackson, Mississippi, to the voters of said State, for ratification or the date of such submission, viz: November 30th, 1870.

And I submit to a separate vote that part of Section 3, of Article VII, of said constitution, which is in the following words—

"That I am not disenfranchised in any of the provisions of the act known as the Reconstruction Acts of the 39th and 40th Congress, and that I admit the political and civil equality of all men; I do help no more or less such attributions to God as sovereign. And, when it is declared that he acts of his own gloriously pleasant, men have thought of him as sitting on a divan, gorgeously arrayed, and saying: "Here I am; and nobody can get up here to harm me; and I will do as I please. And if any man murmers, I will send a thunderbolt after him, and that will fix him. And if any man rebels, I will crush him, and that will fix him. I can do it; and therefore I will do it." Now, what kind of a God is that who says, "I will do so and so because I can?" and who, with a sweeping through the ages with feet wet with the blood of those, that he has trampled and crushed, and with no reason except "I can; I will, and will not be questioned?" He is a tyrant. And tyranny when it is made supreme, is wantonness. And to say that such a being is to be revered and worshipped is to make all ideas of right. You may surround it with the halo of glory as much as you please, and make it as admirable as you please, and the fundamental element of truth and justice will rule out such a character as that. No man could worship such a God; or, if he did, the more religion he had the worse he would be.

WOMAN.

Females, owing to the peculiar and important relations which they sustain, their regular organization, and the offices they perform, are subject to many sufferings. Freedom from those contributes in no small degree to their happiness and welfare, for none can be happy who are ill. Not only so, but no one of those various female complaints can long be suffered to run on without involving the general health of the individual, and ere long producing permanent sickness and promoting decline. Nor is it pleasant to consult a physician for the relief of these delicate affections, and only upon the most urgent necessity will a true woman so far sacrificed her greatest charm as to do this. The sex will then thank us for placing in their hands simple specifics which will be found efficacious in relieving and curing almost every one of those troublesome complaints peculiar to the sex.

Hundreds suffer on in silence, and hundreds of others apply vainly to druggists and doctors, who either merely tantalize them with the hope of a cure or apply remedies which make them worse. I would not wish to assert anything that would be injurious to the afflicted, but I am obliged to say that although it may be produced from over-exertion, the exhaustion of the powers of life, by laborious employment, unwholesome air and food, profuse menstruation, the use of tea and coffee, and frequent child-birth, it is far oftener caused by direct irritation, applied to the parts by the medicine of the regular physician itself.

When following the causes of these distressing complaints, it is most painful to contemplate the accumulated evils consequent upon them. It is but slightly to allude to the subject to enumerate a few of the many additional causes which so largely affect the life, health, and happiness of woman in all classes of society, and which, consequently, affect more or less directly, the welfare of the entire human family. They include that evils for precocious education and marriage, causes the years that nature designed for full development to be wasted and perverted in the fashions of dress, the confinement of school, and especially in the unhealthy excitement of the ball-room. Thus, with the body half-clothed, and the mind unduly excited by pleasure, perverting the night to revel the hours designed by nature for sleep and rest, the work of destruction is half accomplished.

The consequence of this early strain upon her system, some tedious years after is required by the delicate woman, to retain her situation in school at a later day than consulting the evil. When one excitement is over, and her prospective keeps the mind worldly, and in opposition to impression, which the now constant wearing of fashionable dress, absolutely forbidding the exercise indispensable to the establishment and retention of organic health and strength, the exposure to the left air the sudden change of temperature, the complete prostration produced by every fashionable dissipation, must, of necessity, produce their legitimate effect. At last, an early marriage caps the climax of misery, and the unfortunate one, hitherto entirely regardless of the laws dictates and most dictates of her delicate nature, becomes an inferior object of medical treatment. This is but a faint picture of the experience of thousands of young women.

Relying for the ability to exercise the functions of the reproductive organs, they require an education of the nervous system, composed of what is called nervous tissue, which is, in common with the fibres, muscles and lips, evidently under the control of the will, as we shall subsequently see, these emotions are excessive, lead, long before puberty, to habits which sap the very life of their victims ere nature has all completed their development.
